What to Do About H and I?

Editor:

For a relatively small city, Eureka offers a couple of unique public transportation features ("Eureka Council Moves Forward with H and I Street Changes," posted online Aug. 8). The first is a north/south six-lane neighborhood freeway, three lanes in each direction, that can zip you all the way from downtown to sister city Henderson Center at an average speed of 40 to 50 miles per hour in just minutes. Intersection stop lights are timed for maximum speed by holding cross traffic in your favor. One drawback to this system is you might find yourself stopped on 14th at H or I just after the light has changed at 10 p.m. with absolutely no traffic anywhere in sight and sit there for what seems like forever. Apparently there are no cameras since I haven't yet gotten a ticket in the mail.

The other feature is an east/west public drag strip with 15-second countdown timers at major north/south intersections. This allows you to pick up speed as the timer reaches the 5, 4, 3, 2, 1 yellow caution light preceding the stop light. At about 40 miles per hour, you can beat this light from a block-and-a-half away. With good light-timing and no one in your way, you can go from Broadway to Myrtle on Seventh Street in about two or three minutes.

Which reminds us all who are old enough to remember the proposed Eureka downtown 101 bypass of the late 1960s and early 1970s. With the removal of some tired Victorian-style buildings between Sixth and Seventh streets, a new and modern four lane bypass would zip the out-of-town traveler quickly and safely past the jumble and inconvenience of driving through downtown Eureka. The current arrangement accomplishes the same thing at a much cheaper cost. Just don't tell the out-of-town travelers. Let's keep this one to ourselves.

Rumor has it that some changes may be in the works. But for now enjoy the convenience and excitement. Look forward the latest issue of Hot Rod Traveler magazine which highlights Eureka's unique driving experiences.

Roy Marin, Eureka

Editor:

The Eureka City Council's decision to reduce the number of lanes on H and I streets does not address the real problem: the pedestrian.

I have been walking and riding a bicycle in Eureka for 18 years and driving for 12 years. I have observed many people with headphones covering their ears while staring at a computer screen walking around totally oblivious to what is going on around them. I have also seen many pedestrians crossing major roads against a red light.

Reducing the number of lanes on H and I streets will do nothing to address this problem. Something needs to be done to hold pedestrians accountable.

In fact, reducing the number of lanes will make it more difficult to cross H and I streets at intersections not controlled by a traffic light. This is because the cars will be closer together in two lanes than they

Eureka Natural Foods Presents Check for $12,000 to Wildfire Relief

EUREKA, CA: Eureka Natural Foods presented a check for $12,000 to the Eureka Rotary Club On Thursday which will begin the process of disseminating the funds raised by ENF's recent Change 4 Change Wild Fire Relief fund raising drive. $500 of the money donated was raised by Ferndale resident, seven-year-old Rylee, who was on hand during the presentation. Rylee raised the money with her mom and grandma by organizing and hosting a bake sale outside the veteran's hall in Ferndale.

Rylee was also honored with a certificate of achievement and gift basket in recognition of her commendable effort.

Between August 3 and August 10, Eureka Natural Foods' customers at both the Eureka and McKinleyville stores had the opportunity to donate their change, or a larger amount, during each transaction to relief efforts in the Carr fire and Mendocino Complex fires. Eureka Natural Foods also donated $2,000 to this effort.

The Rotary Club of Eureka will use the Rotary Club of Redding to strategically place half of these funds to support efforts of the Carr Fire with funds funneled through the Shasta Community Regional Fund. The Lake and Mendocino Rotary Clubs will place the other half of these funds supporting the Mendocino Complex fires utilizing LARCA, their Rotary District Fire Relief Fund.

Eureka Natural Foods is asking both Rotary Clubs to document and report back exactly where these funds are placed with photos and testimonials accompanying their report. ENF will publish these reports on both their Facebook page and website so that donors and customers will know how their donations were distributed and what effect they had. Eureka Natural Foods has great confidence in Rotary handling these funds. Rotary is well known for making 100% of their donations directed to their targets without administrative fees.

Eureka Natural Foods has raised thousands of dollars for local non-profit organizations through their Change 4 Change program, and through this effort they provided locals who want to help with an avenue to do so.

Eureka Natural Foods is a family-run business serving Northern California since 1944. They offer natural and organic products free of GMO's, antibiotics, hormones, pesticides and radiation.

Condescend Much?

Editor:

I'm not going to take the time to debate the self-indulging premise of the body of the publisher's letter, but address the last paragraph.

The last paragraph simply translated: "I am so sorry you are so stupid but here is how you can redeem yourselves."

Condescending? You think?

After all, why would you bother to attempt to understand the other point of view when it is so obviously flawed.

To my Democrat friends — You need to take a step back and listen to yourselves.

Charlie Giannini, Fortuna

Editor:

Let me congratulate you on your pathway to group think ("Enough, Mr. President," Aug. 16). Very stylish and right in step with New York City and similar agendas. But where do you get writing off the 2016 election and the vote of over 60 million Americans? Neither I nor others who voted for Trump need to apologize to anyone. My vote is none of your damned business and we need no self-righteous publisher telling us what to do or how to think. There is freedom of the press, and because of that the press has a high responsibility to print the facts and not personal crusades. I am one of the few Americans who has shed blood to give the press that freedom and I expect them to use it honestly. Is Trump obnoxious? Hell, yes. I wouldn't want to hang out with him and be his buddy. I voted for someone who would get things done. What do I care if he is well-spoken, polite, good looking and is awed by the press? For eight years I put up with a polite, but feckless intellectual who gave away the store daily. Trump was legally elected and is the president ... deal with it. It is a shame you can't see the good things he has done in less than two years. Your hate for the man overrides your love of country ... sadly.

I could begin to remind you of Obama's lies on healthcare, Benghazi, IRS, Fast and Furious, Syria, ISIS, unemployment, etc., but I believe I would be wasting my time. This is the left coast and your publisher has clearly shown us that the Journal is

Editor:

Great appreciation to Mike Kelly and family for the amazing photos of "creatures of the shallows" (Aug. 16). And no less for the reminder that these beautiful species are literally at our feet along our coast, with tips on how to spot them.

While acknowledging the deep thanks I often feel for NCJ's news reporting, Kelly's feature is an unexpected and remarkable gift calling for my public response.

The Sentencing of Marci Kitchen

With guilty pleas in place, uncertainty still surrounds how much time the Fortuna mom faces

By Kimberly Wear

kim@northcoastjournal.com

Just weeks before her trial was set to begin, Marci Kitchen stood in front of Judge Kaleb Cockrum on Monday and pleaded guilty to fatally hitting two teenage girls, including her daughter, while driving drunk in 2016 and fleeing the scene of the crash.

Wearing a black and white brocade-style dress with a suit jacket, Kitchen spent the nearly hour-long proceeding with her hands clasped in front of her, either looking ahead or down at the floor, appearing at times to hold back tears.

She softly answered, "Yes, your honor," her voice sometimes wavering, as Cockrum asked a series of questions about whether she understood the legal implications of pleading guilty to vehicular manslaughter and DUI causing injury, along with the special allegations that she caused the girls' deaths and fled the scene.

Behind her, quiet crying could be heard in the otherwise hushed courtroom filled with family members of Kiya Kitchen and Faith Tsarnas — who were both 14 when they were struck from behind while skateboarding on Eel River Drive on July 12, 2016.

Tsarnas died at the scene and Kiya

Kitchen's death followed a day later at a Bay Area hospital she had been flown to following the crash.

Now more than two years later, after numerous delays and continuances, the case that left a tight-knit community reeling may be headed for an abrupt conclusion with Kitchen's decision to give up her right to a trial. But a number of uncertainties remain, including how much prison time — if any — she will receive and whether her plea will stand.

None of those in attendance chose to address the court.

The judge explained that Kitchen's decision was predicated on him sentencing her to the mid-term cap of two years for the principal charge of vehicular manslaughter while intoxicated without gross negligence. Cockrum noted that Kitchen's maximum exposure in the case was a "point of contention," with the defense asserting it was 10 years and four months and the prosecution placing the total at 11 years.

Cockrum said he will consider the probation report, the stance of the district attorney's office and input from family and friends of the defendant and the victims in making his final decision at her Sept. 18 sentencing, any of which could "convince" him a harsher sentence is in order.

"If I do consider the four-year high term (on the principal charge), I will give you your plea back," Cockrum told Kitchen, meaning her guilty plea would be withdrawn and the case would once again head to trial.

After the hearing, Kitchen was escorted from the courthouse by deputies for security reasons, according to Sheriff William Honsal, who said the security detail was provided at Cockrum's request due to the emotionally charged nature of the case and threats of violence that Kitchen has received.

The Humboldt County Sheriff's Office also "sequestered" her before the proceedings for the same reasons, rather than having her stand in the courtroom hallway with the large assembled group, where other deputies were also stationed for a time.

"We just wanted to make sure, even though we have courthouse security and screening, that everyone feels safe, so we wanted to have a presence there," Honsal said.

Cockrum denied requests by Deputy

Timeline of the Kitchen Case

July 12, 2016 — Kiya Kitchen and Faith Tsarnas are struck by a car while skateboarding on Eel River Drive in Fortuna. Tsarnas is pronounced dead at the scene.

July 13, 2016 — Kiya Kitchen is pronounced dead at Children's Hospital in Oakland.

July 21, 2016 — The California Highway Patrol announces that it is seeking Marci Kitchen for questioning, calling her a person of interest in the case.

Sept. 15, 2016 — The district attorney's office files a complaint charging Marci Kitchen with vehicular manslaughter without gross negligence and DUI causing injury, with special allegations that she caused the girls' deaths and fled the scene after the crash. Kitchen is booked into jail and released after posting $750,000 bail.

May 10, 2017 — Judge John Feeney finds there is sufficient evidence to hold Marci Kitchen to stand trial.

Feb. 28, 2018 — Marci Kitchen's private attorneys Patrik Griego and Ben Okin withdraw from the case after she runs out of money to pay them. The county's conflict counsel's office is appointed to represent her.

Aug. 2, 2018 — Marci Kitchen's new attorney Meagan O'Connell files a motion seeking a change of venue.

Aug. 20, 2018 — Marci Kitchen appears in court and officially pleads guilty as charged in the case.

Sept. 4, 2018 — A custody hearing is scheduled to determine whether Marci Kitchen should remain free on bail until her sentencing hearing.

Sept. 18, 2018 — A hearing is scheduled to sentence Marci Kitchen.

District Attorney Stacey Eads and private attorney Heidi Holmquist-Wells, who is representing Kiya Kitchen's father Joe Kitchen and her brother, to immediately take Marci Kitchen into custody without bail.

Eads cited Marci Kitchen's role in the "tragic deaths of two young girls" and her efforts "to cover up the crime" — apparently referring to reports that she hid her damaged Jeep and tried to persuade her son not to speak with investigators.

Both told the judge she was a flight risk, with Holmquist-Wells noting her ability to pay a $750,000 bail has allowed her to remain free for the 770 days since the girls were killed but Kitchen has now essentially been convicted and faces a decade in prison.

"The only logical decision is to remand her into custody," Holmquist-Wells told the judge.

Kitchen's attorney, Deputy Conflict Counsel Meagan O'Connell, argued against a jail confinement, saying her client has abided by "every bail condition" and has had periods of travel from which she "returned as planned." O'Connell added that Kitchen has surrendered her passport.

Cockrum set a Sept. 4 custody hearing on the matter.

But the question that remains — ultimately to be decided by Cockrum — is how long of a sentence, if any, should Kitchen receive under her pleas.

While all the charges, special allegations and enhancements Kitchen faces carry a combined maximum penalty of 35 years, California sentencing law is complex and Kitchen's exposure in this case has always been substantially less.

California has a three-tiered sentencing structure in felony cases, meaning judges choose from three potential sentences — a minimum, a mid-term and a maximum — for each charge, depending on whether they find circumstances that either aggravate or mitigate the crime. Under extraordinary circumstances they can also grant probation in most cases.

In Kitchen's case, Cockrum noted factors including the vulnerability of the victims, the seriousness of the injuries she caused and the defendant's attempts to interfere in the investigation on the aggravating side and her lack of a criminal record, not being on parole or having a prison strike as mitigating her case.

Things get a lot more complicated when a defendant is convicted of multiple offenses. When that happens, in the vast majority of cases, the judge will sentence the "principal" offense — or the one deemed most serious. Then, he or she is bound to impose sentences of one-third of the mid-term for each subsequent count for which the defendant is convicted, and can opt to impose those either concurrently, meaning they don't add any additional time to the sentence imposed for the "principal" offense, or consecutively, meaning they would stack on top of one another, elongating the total sentence.

In Kitchen's case, the principal count is the manslaughter charge — meaning the three subsequent counts must each be sentenced at one-third of the mid-term sentence, which would be two years and eight months for count two, three years and four months for count three, and one year for count four. But even that is unlikely — and possibly illegal — in this case, according to a legal expert consulted by the Journal.

University of California Hastings College of Law professor David Levine said the charges in Kitchen's case overlap, meaning there are multiple counts charging Kitchen with the same underlying conduct. That's a problem when it comes to sentencing as the law only allows someone to be punished once for a specific act.

Looking at Kitchen's case, Levine said it can certainly be argued that all four counts essentially charge the same crime, which was driving drunk, killing the girls and fleeing the scene.

"You're not going to get hit (at sentencing) with two counts where there's substantial overlap," Levine said, adding that Cockrum, who was appointed to the bench in February, will have a lot of discretion as to how he sentences the case and whether to impose concurrent sentences for the four counts.

Cockrum made reference to that law during Monday's hearing, saying it would be "up to the court to decide whether (Penal Code) 654 applies in this case."

Another factor that will likely determine how much time — if any — Kitchen spends in custody is recent changes to California's sentencing laws under prison realignment and Proposition 57. Specifically, while most people sent to state prison will only serve half their sentences if they receive credits for good conduct, Proposition 57 lowered that to a third for certain "nonviolent" offenses, including vehicular manslaughter, meaning that Kitchen may serve only a third of whatever sentence is ultimately imposed by the court. That means even if she is sentenced to the 11 years prosecutors believe to be the maximum allowable, she could be free after serving three years, eight months.

Regardless, Eads said Monday that the mid-term cap was not an offer from the district attorney's office, as she had previously made clear about Kitchen's decision to waive her right to a trial and plead guilty, saying: "The people have offered nothing."

Week in Weed

The High Price of Freedom

By Thadeus Greenson
thad@northcoastjournal.com

The libertarian Cato Institute released its annual report this week ranking the freest states in the nation and, perhaps unsurprisingly, California ranked among the very bottom, 48th out of 50.

But the list, which ranked states through a libertarian lens based on personal and economic freedoms across 230 policy variables, including taxation, gun freedoms, civil liberties, incarceration rates and education, also included a few surprises. Among them was the Cato Institute's opinion that California is the very freest state in the nation when it comes to cannabis.

We couldn't help but chuckle. While the Golden State is the largest and most notable to roll out adult-use recreational legalization, few would argue that it's taken a libertarian approach. If you ask farmers and distributors struggling to come into compliance with hundreds of pages of seemingly ever-changing regulations, you're likely to hear an anti-government rant that could make Ron Paul blush.

The state of California, meanwhile, just reported that it brought in around $74.2 million in marijuana industry tax revenue during the second quarter of 2018, up about $14 million from the first quarter, representing what the state dubbed a "growing" trend.

But the $134 million in tax revenue through the first six months of the year is still far short of the $185 million the state had projected to haul in. An industry survey, meanwhile, offered a possible hypothesis as to why revenue is lagging, finding that one in five Californians bought marijuana from an unlicensed source over the past three months, with 84 percent saying they were “highly likely” to do so again because of the higher prices and taxes that come with buying from licensed retail establishments.

Earlier this month, lawyers in Calaveras County filed a class action lawsuit seeking to win back roughly $16 million in taxes and fees paid to the county by cannabis growers looking to step into line for state and local licenses.

The lawsuit alleges the county “unlawfully compelled” growers to pay mandatory taxes and registration fees in 2017 to come into compliance before passing an ordinance banning all commercial cannabis cultivation the following January.

Andrew Greer, CEO of Golden State Herb and a plaintiff in the case, called the move a “bait and switch,” alleging county officials took the cannabis cash in an effort to balance the county’s budget while all the time planning to impose the moratorium. A hearing on the case is scheduled for Dec. 5.

The Atlantic published a long-form exploration of the link between the cannabis legalization movement and increased instances of cannabis addiction.

But before you snicker and dust off those Doritos and couch potato jokes, consider this: The article points to peer-reviewed studies indicating that the number of adults with self-described cannabis-use disorder nationally has doubled since the early 2000s, with the number of consumers reporting daily or near-daily use having jumped by about 50 percent.

Researchers interviewed for the story warned that the legalization movement — reacting to federal prohibition — has overstepped in selling cannabis as a natural, non-addictive alternative to other vices. “They argue that state and local governments are setting up legal regimes without sufficient public-health protection, with some even warning that the country is replacing one form of reefer madness with another, careening from treating cannabis as if it were as dangerous as heroin to treating it as if it were as benign as kombucha,” the article states. (Side note: Atlantic contributing editor Annie Lowrey evidently needs to be schooled on the dangers of kombucha. We suggest starting with our Aug. 10, 2006 cover, “Kombucha Culture.” Trigger warning: There’s an anecdote about a kombucha-linked case of Strep-vaginitis.)

Add to the mix the steadily escalating potency of available cannabis products, the national thirst for pseudo wellness science and the widespread commercialization of another “vice product” and Mark A. R. Kleiman, a professor of public policy at New York University, tells The Atlantic that the legalization movement does “have a lot on its conscience now.”

In the words engraved into a wall at the Korean War Veterans Memorial, it seems “freedom is not free.” ●

APD Chief Hopes to Close Lawson Case in 8 Weeks

Protesters demanding justice for slain Humboldt State University student David Josiah Lawson effectively shut down two Arcata City Council meetings last week, leading Interim Police Chief Richard Ehle to offer an unusual update on the case.

Speaking to protesters after they shut down the council's Aug. 16 meeting, itself a carryover from a meeting disrupted the night before, Ehle said he hopes to bring the investigation into the 2017 stabbing to a close in six to eight weeks. He also rebuffed protesters' demands to have retired FBI agent Tom Parker brought back onto the case — saying Parker indicated he had nothing more to offer the investigation, a notion Parker disputed when contacted by the Journal the following day.

Parker had been offering his consulting services pro-bono to aid the Lawson investigation until he stepped away in April, alleging that APD had refused to heed his advice, was making little progress and had lied to him about aspects of the investigation. Less than 24 hours after Parker's resignation, then Police Chief Tom Chapman abruptly followed suit.

Protesters have repeatedly urged the city to do whatever is necessary to bring Parker back to the investigation, and that was their central demand Aug. 15 and Aug. 16, when they occupied city council chambers and disrupted the meetings.

During the Aug. 15 council meeting, City Manager Karen Diemer indicated she would reach out to Parker in an effort to quell the protests. Then, after the Aug. 16 meeting adjourned prematurely in the face of another 30 or so protesters, Ehle offered an update on the investigation and answered protesters' questions for about 20 minutes.

Ehle told the group that the city has poured an additional $100,000 into the investigation, and has brought on six detectives and case analysts in recent weeks. He said he hopes to have a "good chargeable case" to forward to the Humboldt County District Attorney's Office within six to eight weeks. When the conversation turned to Parker, Ehle seemed to imply that Parker had declined an offer from Diemer to return to the investigation.

"We talked to Tom Parker today and he agreed when talking to Karen that, with the forces we have martialled, the cooperation with the DA's office, the letters we've sent to the FBI, the Department of Justice, that, he said, 'You might as well keep going with what you're doing because I can't be of further assistance,'" Ehle said.

Reached by the Journal, Parker disputed that he said any such thing.

"I never said that," he said. "I do think that there are things I have to offer but, at this point, they haven't asked and I haven't offered, so I'll keep my fingers crossed that the people they're bringing in do have that knowledge and those skills."

The interim police chief also made some comments about how he'd like to see the case progress when or if criminal charges are filed.

"I will tell you this, we are looking at a potential change of venue," he said. "We are also looking at bringing in a career prosecutor to assist us on the case. If [the district attorney's office] would acquiesce to that career prosecutor helping them prosecute the case, then we might have a bargain."

Ehle's comments aside, it would be up to prosecutors to decide whether to argue for a change of venue in the case and a judge to decide whether that would be necessary. Similarly, it would be Humboldt County District Attorney Maggie Fleming's decision whether to seek outside assistance for the prosecution.

Reached via email Saturday, Fleming dismissed the notion that the case would require bringing in an outside "career prosecutor."

"I have not had any conversations with APD about a change of venue nor about bringing in an outside prosecutor,"

she wrote, adding that she doesn't see "any benefit" to talking about a potential change of venue with no case filed. "The Lawson case has not been, and will not be, affected by any limitations on the capability or capacity of the Humboldt County District Attorney's Office — one additional murder case would not cause any such limitations. Our office includes a number of attorneys very capable of prosecuting murder cases, as evidenced by recent results."

ART IN THE STREETS

Story and photos by

Dave Van Patten's first day of work on a wall of The Shanty.

Stock Schlueter dips his paintbrush in a deep forest green and pit-pats leaves onto a tree in the far-right corner of his painting in Opera Alley. His piece is an ode to a spot along Madden Creek he's grown fond of.

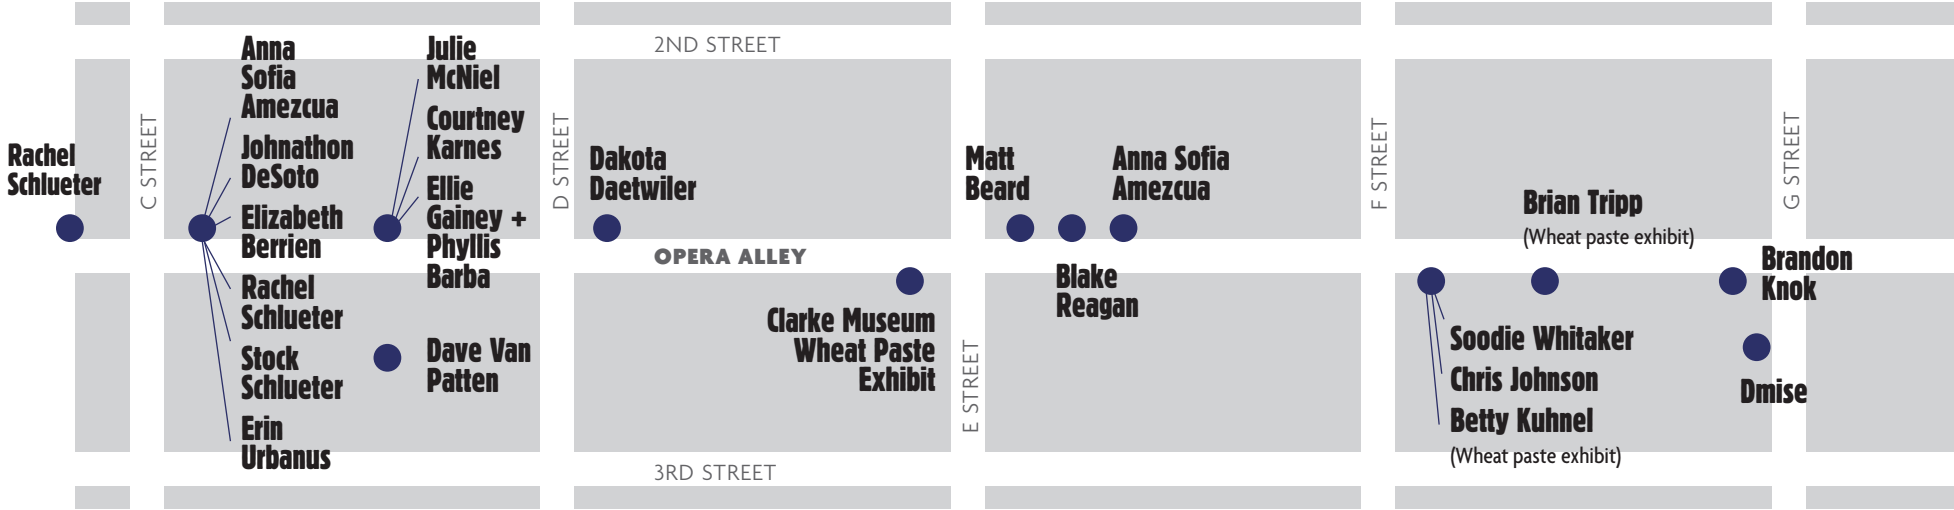

Beginning Aug. 11, more than 20 local and visiting artists transformed walls along Opera Alley (plus one outlier on Fifth Street) with murals as part of Eureka's first Street Art Festival. The week-long event ended with a street party Aug. 18 to celebrate the completion of the works. The artists were all compensated, either by cash or barter, and their material costs reimbursed. Local or not, each artist participating had their own unique ties to Northern California and many expressed feeling honored to take part in the inaugural festival.

Schlueter's great aunt came into the area from Weaverville in the 1800s on a hunting expedition. She and her husband arrived in Hobo Gulch and fell in love with the area, vowing to come back. Eventually selling the cleaning business they owned in the Bay Area, they bought out a homestead in Burnt Ranch. Before he was born, Schlueter's mother would come visit her aunt on the ranch, where his father, a World War II veteran from Chicago, was renting a cabin on the homestead and working in the logging industry.

"The rest is history," Schlueter says with a chuckle. His parents settled in Burnt Ranch before having him. "They were visiting Oakland and I decided it was time to come out, I had places to go, things to see, but I grew up a very rural life. Outhouses, trapline, hunting, fishing."

"Growing up was like living in the 1800s back then," Schlueter recalls, "every wild creature tame and every tame creature wild. It was this menagerie of life that was my first recollection of being here on this planet."

Schlueter graduated from Hoopa Valley High School with scholarships for wrestling and football, but he'd always recalled being keen to art projects. He spent his years after college felling timber with his father and saved up a bit of money before realizing he wasn't going to be a painter if he kept doing that because he was making too good money. So he sold everything he owned and traded two of his paintings for a 1951 Chevy flatbed ton-and-a-half truck.

"And I built a gypsy-wagon camper on the back of it," he says pausing from painting to grin, "wood stove, the whole smash." It was his studio and his residence for five or six years. He lived at creeks, caught trout, ate rice and painted. He'd put together shows at the bars or anywhere that would have him. That was when he first felt he was surviving as an artist.

Schlueter's piece for the art festival is a painting of Madden Creek, near Willow Creek. To him it represents more than just Humboldt County. He recalls seeing the creek completely destroyed in the 1964 flood. "It was wiped out — no trees, nothin' along the edge of it, gutted completely to the river," he said.

As Schlueter remembered being fortunate enough to witness the rebirth of Madden Creek, he paused to tell a side story from earlier in the festival. A couple traveling from San Diego asked where it was and, despite its semi-remote location, decided to try to find it. After some trouble and help from Schlueter, the couple eventually made it and sent him a text message with a picture from the very spot Schlueter was painting.

"That's kind of the reason I paint landscapes so much — to show people what a beautiful place we live in," he says. "And maybe if we realize that we'll take better care of it and each other and etcetera, etcetera."

Organizing the festival took determined individuals on several fronts, including financial and staff support from Black Faun Gallery, Humboldt Cider Co. and the city of Eureka, along with aid from 26 other sponsors. Kevin Bourke, owner of the Black Faun Art Gallery in Old Town, and his staff originally worked to sponsor the two murals that went up last year — Dan Kitchener's "Electric-City" on the Buhne building and Duncan Jago's "Mr. Jago Mural" on the De Paul building — that served as blueprint pieces that eventually helped pave the way for the festival.

Claire Reynolds, the Black Faun Gallery's director, credits the local business community for its positive reception of the initial murals that went up last summer. She also credits the city of Eureka for helping put the gallery into contact with Michelle Cartledge of Humboldt Cider Co., who had also approached the city about doing an art festival.

"Folks at the city facilitated putting us together and the rest began to fall into place," Reynolds says. Throughout the week, she was busy leading daily evening tours and putting up art on walls that were previously unavailable.

A face seen nearly everywhere Reynolds could be found was community organizer Jenna Catsos, who was integral in making the festival a reality. Her hands have been busy with everything from seeking out vendors, bands and artists for Saturday's festivities to actually creating the design for the publications for the event.

"Helping organize this festival was getting to work with two things I love: Eureka and its community, and art. The energy of the town and the potential they see really spoke to me," says Catsos.

Not a far distance from Schlueter's installation is The Shanty, where Long Beach artist Dave Van Patten has been painting with the assistance of friend and fellow artist James Carey.

Van Patten first found himself in Humboldt County in 2012, visiting his sister at Humboldt State University. At the time, she was a bartender at the Local Beer Bar in Eureka and had linked him up with owners Darren and Michelle Cartledge to do a mural. After its closing and the opening of the Humboldt Cider Co. taproom, he was brought in again to do artwork for the place and branding for the company.

For the Eureka Street Art Festival, Humboldt Cider Co. reached out to Van Patten — again.

"Darren and Michelle came to me and gave options of walls. I felt like I had enough inspiration to be able to take on this one, so I did. Thankfully, with the help of my friend James Carey, we've stayed on schedule to finish," says Van Patten.

Van Patten says he drew inspiration for some of the characters in the painting from The Beatles album Magical Mystery Tour, blended with a "creepy JimHenson" style. "A lot of the other influence came from The Shanty bar itself," he says. "It's got a realness to it, kind of a grittiness but also a real community-type atmosphere."

Not all community response has been positive. Van Patten says some have argued events like the festival result in a "gentrification" to the area but he sees otherwise. Over the years, Van Patten says he's seen Eureka work as a community to make changes for the good. "Obviously no one wants rent to go up or to see the soul of the community get wiped away, but I feel like the change I've seen Eureka endure over the years has been positive."

Van Patten says he feels privileged to take part in the first of what he hopes will be an annual street art festival in Eureka. "To be able to paint the wall of a valued bar is a total honor — that comes from the bottom of my heart. I'm extremely grateful."

Directly to Van Patten's right is the 36-by-18-foot, east-facing wall of Mendenhall Studios. Parked nearly against it: a scaffold, a bucket lift and four women collaborating on a mural titled "Spin." With the help of Julie McNiel at Mendenhall Ellie Gainey, foreground, leans back on the third level of a scaffold to examine her work, while Phyllis Barba, background, uses a bucket lift, to reach the top of her section, Saturday, Aug. 18. The two were collaborating with two additional women, Courtney Karnes and Zaila Barba-Oliveri.

Studios, the four got a grant from the In-grid Nickelsen Trust to take on their largest project to date.

One of the artists working on the mural is 21-year-old Ellie Gainey, who has a space at Mendenhall Studio and is art-neighbors with fellow collaborator Courtney Karnes. The other two contributing to the mural are Siren Song owner Phyllis Barba and her daughter Zaila Barba-Oliveri, whom Gainey met just as they began working.

Gainey had never worked on a scaffold before. "It's been fun, I've been calling it an adult jungle gym," she says with a laugh. "But it does present a challenge when you can't see your work for the day without climbing down and stepping far back."

The "dream-esque" concept for the mural pays tribute to several aspects of Humboldt County including the historic nature of taking part in the first ever Eureka Street Art Festival. Some of Karnes' contributions include the eggs of steelhead swirling into various stages of life. The columbine flow-ers Barba patterns into the mural are native to the area as well.

Part of Gainey's contribution is a lyric from a song titled "The Breeze," by Dr. Dog. "It's about striving for our goals and dreams we wish to manifest in our life. Filling our early mornings and late nights pursuing these ideas we want most," she says.

A level below on the scaffold, Karnes outlines a section of mural filled with rainbow trout eggs growing into steelhead. Karnes has been living in Humboldt County for 14 years, ever since the school bus she was traveling in broke down. Before then, she was caravanning from place to place attending rainbow gatherings — big out-door peace celebrations.

"Spin" is the largest piece Karnes has worked on and the first requiring a scaffold. Normally, she can be found sculpting or jewelry-smithing in her space at Mendenhall Studios.

"It means a lot to take part in this," she says. "I live in Old Town, so just to be here putting something up for the whole community is a special experience."

Farther north in Opera Alley, sporting a bubblegum-magenta mohawk is Blake Reagan, painting the entire alley wall of The Speakeasy. Reagan is equipped with an orange man-lift provided to artists by sponsors of the festival.

Reagan moved to the area 13 years ago and, like many, fell in love with the red-woods. He became involved with activism, mainly tree-sitting and support in fighting to keep the old growth trees from being removed. Before landing here, he hadn't really done much art.

For his mural on The Speakeasy, each workday has been roughly 10 to 12 hours. "I get up around 6:30 or 7. Once the sun comes up, you get the coffee, you get to work, then the sun goes down and you can't really work in the dark since colors change."

The center of Reagan's mural depicts singer Nina Kristopherson and is surrounded with what he calls a "Billy Holiday vibe." Reagan wanted his piece to channel the energy of the building, which has vintage decor. He was also inspired by the Art Deco throughout Old Town, elements of which he purposefully included at the top of his piece.

Looking up at the mural, Reagan can't seem to pick one source of inspiration. He says the clouds, music, pattern and color are all sources for his work. "I just got a paintin' problem," he says with a wide grin, looking up at the 20-by-30-foot building. "I can't really stop and I like goin' big." ●

Flower Power

Planning a prettier garden for now and next year

By Katie McGourty

downanddirty@northcoastjournal.com

Whether a formal rose garden or a small patch of cheerful sunflowers, nothing makes a lush vegetable garden pop more than a backdrop of colorful flowers. Depending on the flower of choice, it can bring elegance and formality, country charm or enchantment. Wispy summer fog adds mystique. Similar to growing vegetables at home, growing flowers at home is easy and much more affordable than buying commercially. Plus, the flowers are never wrapped in plastic or driven in a truck, which reduces landfill waste and greenhouse gas emissions.

As we move into the last month of summer here on the home farm, we can really take in some color and texture from all of the amazing flowers blooming their hearts out in our cut flower garden. The queen is of course the bubblegum pink Amaryllis belladonna lily (aka naked lady). She hangs over the front walkway, creating a showy entrance not unlike a row of graceful ballerinas in tutus. Our towering sunflowers hold us in anticipation of the first bloom. Carnations offer small blooms with intense color and surprise us with their spicy fragrance. Dahlias (cactus and single flower forms) dazzle the eye with rich, colorful splendor. A few lingering sweet peas add amazing perfume, along with a clip of star jasmine. Yellow St. John's Wort offers beautiful contrast and texture, and hot pink yarrow adds a modern twist to an old classic. The lavender offers a second crop of blossoms, leaping out of a background of silvery green foliage.

We love growing cut flowers because then there's no limit to how many bouquets we can have at any one moment. Flowers bring happiness no matter the size or color. Offering a bouquet of fresh, homegrown flowers to a friend overwhelms them with joy. Cut flowers also attract pollinators including bees, butterflies and hummingbirds. Additionally, all of our picks are drought tolerant. We are amazed at how little care and attention these plants require, and how much they enrich our lives with their color and fragrance.

Late summer is a great time to plan for next year's flower garden. The decision of what to plant can be overwhelming, as there are so many flowers to choose from. A great place to start is by focusing on color. There's nothing more satisfying than having a bouquet in 13 shades of your favorite color, along with some lush greenery such as ferns or ornamental grasses. Grab a color wheel and start dreaming.

Bulbs

Starting a bulb garden offers the beginning gardener an easy option. The hardest part about growing bulbs is putting them in the ground. After that, they're out of sight and out of mind until they magically emerge. Bulbs may take a couple years after planting to flower —patience is a virtue! Bulbs are also affordable and some, such as iris and dahlia, spread and expand underground, requiring periodic thinning. Many of the flowers in our bulb garden were gifts from other gardeners. Neighborhood walks sometimes yield unexpected treasures in the form of freshly dug bulbs neatly labeled "FREE" in a cardboard box, along with an indication of the variety and color. These are confidence boosters because if someone else grew them to the point of needing to thin them, there's a good chance that they'll thrive in another neighborhood location. Bulbs can be planted directly in the ground or in containers that are rotated by season to offer fresh pops of color. Keep in mind the height of the flower and plant in progressive layers from short to tall to fit in as many blossoms as possible.

August is a great time to plant flowering bulbs including belladonna lily and Narcissus. Belladonna lily bulbs can be planted immediately after blooming ends (late August into early September). This bulb should be planted shallow, just covering the bulb, approximately 1 foot apart. All parts of this showy blossom are toxic so make sure to plant in an area away from potentially curious nibblers. Narcissus (daffodils, narcissus and jonquils) offer the early spring garden amazing color and cheer. Dig in some compost prior to planting, as they require well-drained soil. Plant these bulbs twice the depth of their size in a place where they'll get full sun when in bloom. They are resistant to deer and gophers and thrive with little to no care. There are many choices of color from white to yellow to orange to pinkish. Bloom time may vary from late winter to mid spring. Plant a few kinds for continuous blooms and chase away those winter blues.

Annuals

Many annuals can be planted in the garden now for winter or spring blossoms. Sweet peas, a home garden classic, add enchantment with intense fragrance and delicate color. In our mild maritime climate we can grow this flower year-round. Right now we can plant early and spring flowering varieties. Sweet peas are fast-growing vines that require support for growth in the form of wire fencing or chicken wire, or string and twine hung from a wooden frame. Snapdragons can be started from seed now and transplanted in the garden in late fall. Depending on the variety, they can offer a vertical element to the flower garden with tall varieties or a pleasant colorful border with dwarf varieties. Calendula may also be sown now for winter and spring blooms. This easy-to-grow flower offers a bright splash of orange or yellow, and the blossoms may be clipped and dried to make medicinal salves to ward off infection. It also self sows, meaning once a patch is established it will come back year after year.

Stop and Smell the Roses

Whatever your flower of choice, it will undoubtedly bring cheer and personality to the home garden. Don't be afraid to make a long list of flowers you'd like to get to know better and chip away at it every seasonal planting opportunity. ●

‘Gravyback’ and the Drums of the Bora Bora

Finding a long lost family recipe for steak sauce and salad

By Thadeus Greenson
thad@northcoastjournal.com

As I was getting over the shock of my father’s unexpected death June 1, 2012, I quickly began to realize how tremendously fortunate I was and am. While life-altering, his death did not leave me crushed with the regrets of things left unsaid or undone, nor with any lingering doubts about just how much I meant to him or of whether he knew just how much I loved him.

But as the days turned to weeks, weeks to months and months to years, my siblings and I did come to share one weighty regret: None of us ever got my father’s two prized recipes.

My dad loved food in a broad, unconditional way, from ballpark sausages to the esteemed offerings of Chez Panisse. In his obituary, I wrote that he “approached each day with an appetite for life that sometimes left stains on his shirt.” While that was largely metaphor, Daniel Greenson lived to eat and I’m pretty sure he didn’t own a shirt that was without stain. (In young adulthood, his best friends saddled him with the nickname “Gravyback Greenson” after he left a table in Italy with a spoonful of gravy dripping down the back of his shirt. To his death, my father insisted he was set up by his dastardly friends and an unscrupulous waiter.)

As the stains — and the Gravyback nickname, more pointedly — attest, moderation was never my father’s strong suit, a fact that was apparent in his prized meal: grilled T-bone steaks bathed in a salty butter sauce and served along a romaine salad with an avocado dressing known in our family as his “Bora Bora Salad.” But for years after his death, we thought these simple delights — served at so many birthdays and celebratory dinners — had been lost. And none of us dared to recreate them without some kind of guidance for fear of somehow tainting the mouth-watering memories.

Fortunately, that changed on Father's Day of 2017. My brother Dave was in town visiting as my wife, Lisa, and I were busily getting ready to meet some friends on vacation. It was a friend's request that we each bring a favorite playlist that sent Lisa scurrying into the garage to fetch an old, dusty box of cassette tapes that she hoped included a prized mix. After she retrieved the box, as we pored through cassette singles and mixes, she grabbed an old TDK tape with a crooked white label scrawled with the words, "Interview with Dan Greenon" in blue chicken-scratch.

"What's this?" she asked.

I looked at her blankly, recognizing my adolescent handwriting but unable to recall what the tape was or when I'd made it. We popped it in and she, my brother and I listened as the seventh-grade version of myself squeakily asked my father a litany of family history questions for a school project. Then, seemingly out of nowhere, I deviated from the script and Dave and I locked eyes, inching forward in our seats.

"How do you make your special steak sauce?" my younger self asked.

"Are you serious? That's not on there," my father protested, referring to the list of questions carefully prepared by my social studies teacher.

"That's my question," I persisted.

"That's not on that thing right there," my father objected once more before relenting and detailing the six ingredients.

My brother's and my eyes lit up again when my younger self continued the push, asking my father how he makes his famous Bora Bora salad — a dressing that has somehow endured since his college days in Berkeley, its name drawn from an old Drums of the Bora Bora record his roommate used to blast as my father mashed scallion and avocado into the fine paste that is the foundation for the dressing.

That night my brother and I made my dad's dinner, trying to pinpoint the proper ratios of mustard powder to garlic, of Worcestershire sauce to seasoned salt. In the months since, we've continued tinkering. The recipes below are approximate and should be modified to taste. After all, my father never measured anything. He just assembled the ingredients by sight before sampling with a spoon to re-season as needed, often dribbling a bit on his shirt in the process.

Dad's Steak Sauce

Ingredients:

- 1 stick unsalted butter, cut into four pieces
- 1 tablespoon mustard powder
- 1 tablespoon Lawry's Seasoned Salt
- 1 teaspoon garlic powder
- 1 teaspoon Tabasco sauce
- 3 tablespoons Lea & Perrins Worcestershire sauce

Turn on the broiler.

Mix the Tabasco, Worcestershire, mustard powder, Lawry's and garlic powder in a shallow 8-by-8-inch baking dish. Add the butter.

Grill your steaks as usual. Once they come off the grill and are resting, place the steak sauce mixture under the broiler until butter is melted.

Remove the baking dish from the oven and stir, returning it to the oven for another 2 minutes until the mixture is bubbling and frothing.

Remove from the oven. Bathe the steaks in sauce prior to serving and place the remainder of the sauce on the table for additional dipping, as desired.

Bora Bora salad

My father suggested mashing the avocado with a "musher" but a potato masher or even a fork will suffice. He also insisted that to make this recipe "legitimately" you must do so while listening to the Drums of the Bora Bora so you can hear "the drums beating as you're mashing the avocado." Serves 4 to 6.

Ingredients:

- 1 head romaine lettuce
- ½ large avocado
- 1 raw egg (use pasteurized if you're concerned about salmonella)
- 3 tablespoons olive oil
- 1 tablespoon red wine vinegar
- 3 scallions, thinly sliced
- 1 teaspoon Lea & Perrins Worcestershire sauce
- 1 teaspoon mustard powder
- 2 teaspoons Lawry's Seasoned Salt
- ½ teaspoon garlic powder
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice

In a large salad bowl, mash the scallions and avocado into a smooth paste. Add other ingredients and stir until well mixed. Toss in lettuce until coated. Serve immediately.

End of Summer Diversions

By Collin Yeo

music@northcoastjournal.com

As I write this I am coming home from a great — but, sadly, too rare these days — evening of live music and I am bushed. Why so rare and why so bushed? Because I am trying to finish up a carpentry project this week so I can enjoy a small pocket of my summer before it disappears entirely. And, although I find it kind of distasteful to wax happy about some little sunny adventure I hope to have in front of the terrifying backdrop of this new permanent wildfire-season we have carved out for ourselves through our species' horrible and greedy nihilistic march toward extinction, I still get excited for little gems on the road to Hell-world. One of those gems for me is imagining piling a small wardrobe and some library-borrowed audiobooks into my old jalopy for a private enactment of my favorite summer flick: M. Hulot's Holiday. If you haven't seen the film, you really should. If you have, you can readily imagine my delight at beaming down into a new place and causing a mild disturbance while the seaside — the object of the journey itself — counts down my departure and the inevitable erosion of all of us with its constantly beating waves.

What I am really trying to say is that the students are back, summer is almost gone and our world continues to get more chaotic. So give yourself a chance to take a nice break from time to time.

May I suggest some diversions?

Thursday

Blondies hosts a free all-ages rock and/or roll show tonight to welcome back the nearby student body. Two Long Beach traveling all-stars, Meow Twins and Free-mans Dead, are the featured acts so come on by at 8:30 p.m. to see what's going on at the bottom of the hill.

Friday

It's a busy Friday night so get ready. Local family act March and the Months presents a psychedelic set entitled Green Dream Kite at The Sanctuary at 7:30 p.m. ($5-$20 sliding scale).

Meanwhile, up at the Van Duzer Theatre at 8 p.m., East L.A.'s Chicano fusion band Las Cafeteras will be overseeing a beautiful and likely sweaty show, as the venue will be set up for a dance-friendly event with a rare unassigned seat general admission deal valued at $33.

An hour later down at The Jam is a soiree entitled the Last Daze of Summer curated by a crew of beat-friendly buds including Hiway, Nada Crew, Lyricalcool, AsonRed and others (price TBA).

And finally, tonight local funky heroes Diggin Dirt cross the Rubicon — or perhaps more likely the Eel River — to present a Humboldt Triumph of a show at Humbrews at 9:30 p.m. ($15). I am told by the band's cohorts that this will be a big one. Yak Attack will also be present for your scrutiny.

Saturday

RampArt Skatepark reaches its punk rock perihelion tonight at 8 p.m. as absolute grindcore heavyweights — for three decades and counting — and all-around fantastic band Napalm Death visits our foggy bottoms from the Albion Land of greater Birmingham, U.K. Joining the group will be local support from Sadistic Hallucinations, FamousxPerson, The Cissies, and Waste Site. This is one of those shows that if you know about it already, I don't have to tell you not to miss it ($15).

Sunday

There's more metal afoot tonight at The Siren's Song as Portland's own Dead Hunt teams up with local rising static wranglers D//FEX for some fun, fun, fun on the cheap. How cheap? Just $3. What time? Oh, around 8 p.m.

Monday

Kiwi vaporwave artist Eye-liner will be at the Miniplex tonight with fellow New Zealand act Jesus HTML Christ (great name but much like the druggy, time-dilated vapor-wave genre of music, I feel like it unfortunately comes with a looming expiration date, much to my own private despair). Also representing will be Los Angeles' similarly aligned electro-ride Limousine at 8 p.m. ($10).

Tuesday

U.K. reggae toastmaster Pato Banton slides into The Jam tonight at 9 p.m. for what should be a hot night for all of you vibe aficionados out there who love island sounds from England to Jamaica and all archipelagos in between. Along for the fun will be Ishi Dube and C-Baker with Dynasty One and Sarge Onewise ($20/$15 advance).

Wednesday

There will be cool and creepy night sounds on tap at the Miniplex this evening as the cross-continental scenes of Los Angeles and New York merge for a collage of dark tunes. From the closer town comes Thief — featuring members of San

Las Cafeteras plays the Van Duzer Theatre at 8 p.m. on Friday, Aug. 24. Courtesy of the artists

Francisco's avant-metal act Botanist — while the far coast is represented by the bleak electronic Hz shards of Piggy Black Cross. If I don't indulge in a late summer escape and jettison from the 707 orbit, I will definitely be here tonight at 8:30 p.m. (price TBA). ●

Summer's hopping along but it ain't over yet. Grab your designated driver and head to Hops in Humboldt on Saturday, Aug. 25 from 1 to 5 p.m. at Rohner Park for one last hurrah ($50, $40 advance, $15 for non-drinkers). Enjoy unlimited samples of beer from all across this great land plus live music, food, and arts and crafts vendors — as long as you're 21 or over.

File

Join the Wiyot Tribe in a celebration of culture that honors elders and veterans during Wiyot Day, Saturday, Aug. 25 from 1 to 8 p.m. at Table Bluff Reservation (free admission, $10 dinner). There will be dance and cultural demonstrations, a stick game, card game tournament, live music, games for kids, vendors and dinner served at 5:30 p.m.

Submitted

Remember a local fallen hero at the fifth annual Kevin Ebbert Memorial Trail Run, an event paying tribute to the Navy SEAL who was killed in action in 2012, on Sunday, Aug. 26 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in Arcata Community Forest ($10 adults, $5 kids). Run through the redwoods as part of the 10k+ or 2-mile trail run. Proceeds go to PacOut Green Team in Kevin's name.

All Aboard

Join the Timber Heritage Association for an afternoon of all the good stuff: eats, artifacts, artisans and more at Salmon, Oysters, Ales and Rails on Saturday, Aug. 25 from 11:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Samoa Roundhouse (free admission, $20 salmon dinner, $10 hot dog lunch).

The Timber Heritage Society's annual open house fundraiser is a fantastic opportunity to learn about local logging and railroad history all while helping support the THA's efforts to restore the historic Roundhouse and continue to bring awareness about a bygone era. The event is particularly special this year as it marks the 125th anniversary of the initial building (1893) of the Vance Lumber Company (purchased by Hammond Lumber Company and continued operation into the 1950s), the Samoa Cookhouse and the town of Samoa. Bruce Seivertson, president of the Timber Heritage Association says, "Sharing the history, buildings, and culture of the Vance/Hammond Lumber Company has always been foremost in the THA's objectives."

Stop by the family friendly event and hop aboard a speeder car and take a ride back in time, listen to live music by the Redwood Dixie-Gators, check out the artisan vendors, blacksmithing demos, hit-and-miss engines, historic artifact collection and the Samoa shops open for tours from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tickets for the barbecued salmon dinner are available at the event. Of course, oysters, beer and wine also available.

Hello, Walls

Downtown and Old Town Eureka just had a week of beautification courtesy of several local and visiting artists who painted magnificent scenes on buildings and structures. Arcata's Creamery District follows suit Saturday, Aug. 25 during the Paint the Town and Night Market from 1 to 9 p.m. (free). Local teaching artist Haley Davis throws some color on the walls at the intersection of Eighth and L starting at 1 p.m.

There's a splash of distinction with this painting party as the public gets to pick up brushes and join in the fun.

After an afternoon of painting, treat yourself to the vibrant Creamery Night Market, which starts at 4 p.m. offering art, live music by Pan Dulce from 5 to 7 p.m., a beer garden and lots of local vendors and tasty food. The Creamery District's studios and businesses will be open until 9 p.m. so you can wander in and out to see what's new with your favorite artists and producers. Stop by Seapod, Bang! Bang! Vintage, Birdman Ceramics, Phoenix Ceramics, MK Studios, The Back Porch and the Good Collective — you might take home a treasure or two. The lively scene also includes a Fusion Partner Dance at Redwood Raks with a lesson at 7 p.m. and dancing at 8 p.m. Saddle up to Wrangletown Cider Company to see what they're pouring and peep Jefferson Ale House's new space.

Crazy Rich Asians

Crazy Good

Crazy Rich Asians earns the love

By Jennifer Fumiko Cahill
jennifer@northcoastjournal.com

CRAZY RICH ASIANS. Director Jon M. Chu's adaptation of Kevin Kwan's best-seller is already a big deal in that it's the first all-Asian cast from a major Hollywood studio since The Joy Luck Club 25 years ago. That it's also raking in cash with a $34 million five-day opening — serious numbers for a rom-com — proves studios embarrassingly wrong in their resistance to casting Asian leads and telling stories centered on Asian-American characters. (What's good, Ghost in the Machine?) And hopefully that will loosen purse strings for more stories from a diverse umbrella community that contains multitudes.

But just as importantly, Crazy Rich Asians is utterly joyful. Instead of cleaving to the Joy Luck model of intergenerational heartbreak or focusing on Asian Americans in relation to white culture and racism, it offers big, gorgeous fantasy of a romantic comedy. It's a decadent visual feast with racks of gowns, food porn (I genuinely regret not smuggling dumplings in my bag) and pretty people with high-class problems. But under those superficial pleasures is a story with heart and generosity. It covers ground we haven't seen before in a major studio production: an Asian American in Asia navigating the cultural chasm that even shared language and traditions can't bridge.

Born of humble means to a single immigrant mother, Rachel Chu (Constance Wu) is a New York University professor of economics who teaches game theory (which she'll need), wears adorable outfits and splits desserts with her Prince Charming history prof boyfriend Nick Young (Henry Golding) from Singapore. Word that he's bringing her home for his best friend's wedding spreads with comic efficiency through the wealthy Chinese expat community — all the way to his disapproving mother, Elanor (the iconic Michelle Yeoh), the formidable woman behind the real estate empire he has neglected to mention to his girlfriend. The cat's partially out of the bag once the young couple boards their luxury flight but it's not until Rachel visits her outrageous fashion-victim friend Peik Lin (the scene-stealing Awkwafina, bringing Queens to Singapore) that she learns Nick's family is the 1 percent of the 1 percent. Cue the fancy makeover montage, embarrassing gaffs at an opulent party and mean girl bullying. Worst of all, there is the stony gaze and brutal judgement of Elanor, who sees Rachel — a selfish American who doesn't understand duty to family — as a threat to her family and calmly informs her, "You will never be enough." (Was she talking to me? Because it felt like she was talking to me.)

Viewed in a vacuum, it's great fun and Gratuitous shirtless scene. You're welcome.

Crazy Rich Asians

earns its teary moments with fine performances from its massive cast, especially the relatable Wu and Yeoh, who brings presence and intensity to Elanor. (That Yeoh out-stunted Jackie Chan back in the day is only a layer of her badassery.) Charming as Golding's Nick is, the movie really pivots on Rachel and Elanor's relationship and Rachel coming to know her worth.

But context, particularly for Asian audiences, can't be ignored. Party scenes with Chinese renditions of big band music recall old Hollywood movies from Ziegfeld Follies to Sabrina — like a do-over with Asian characters at center stage rather than off in the wings as flimsy props and foils. Ken Jeong, as Piek Lin's hilariously tacky dad, does a broken English gag that seems to poke at stuttering bucktooth stereotypes. And as salve to the historic lack of Asian men as romantic leads and all those articles about racism on dating apps, I counted four lingering shirtless scenes, including one in which Wu gives Golding a full glasses-lowered once-over with the female gaze, complete with a “hubba-hubba.” And hearing Katherine Ho sing Coldplay's “Yellow” in Chinese over a scene of heartbreak is something else, the love song momentarily transforming a word that's always been a slur.

Will every non-Asian person in the audience get every joke, nuance and symbolic moment? No. And that's OK. (Though if you want to understand the meta-game happening in the mahjong scene, I recommend Jeff Yang's obsessive breakdown.) Ask any immigrant or any immigrant's child visiting the old country: You can still love

Previews

BLINDSPOTTING. Daveed Diggs stars as a man finishing up probation and trying to keep his nose clean despite the efforts of his loose cannon friend (Rafael Casal). R. 95M. MINOR.

THE HAPPYTIME MURDERS. Melissa McCarthy stars as a detective investigating the deaths of kids' show puppets amid seedy characters and don't bring your kids. R. 91M. BROADWAY, FORTUNA, MILL CREEK.

SUMMER OF '84. Teens who suspect their neighbor is a serial killer enjoy the thrill of snooping around until things get scary. R. 105M. MINOR.

THE SANDLOT (1993). You're killing me, Smalls. PG. 101M. BROADWAY.

Continuing

ALPHA. Dramatization of an Ice Age hunter who teams up with a wolf to survive. PG-13. 96M. BROADWAY.

ANT-MAN AND THE WASP. Tiny Paul Rudd tackles big problems with his new, flying partner (Evangeline Lilly). A less portentous Marvel movie than we've seen of late. PG-13. 125M. BROADWAY.

BLACKKKLANSMAN. Spike Lee's

true-story drama about an African American cop (John David Washington) infiltrating the Klan is a crackling tale of intrigue, a character study and a painfully relevant look at a bygone era. R. 135M. BROADWAY, MINOR.

CHRISTOPHER ROBIN. Pooh gets real with Ewan McGregor as the boy from the books. PG. 104M. BROADWAY, FORTUNA, MILL CREEK.

EATING ANIMALS. Natalie Portman narrates a documentary about American animal agriculture based on Jonathan Safran Foer's memoir. Maybe skip the butter on your popcorn. NR. 94M. MINIPLEX.

EIGHTH GRADE. Elsie Fisher plays a girl struggling through the final days of junior high in director Bo Burnham's film, capturing the terror, intensity and immediacy of adolescence with rawness and compassion. 93M. MINOR.

THE KING. Road-trip documentary by Eugene Jarecki exploring the legacy of Elvis and America's crumbling democracy. R. 147M. MINIPLEX.

MAMMA MIA! HERE WE GO AGAIN. A fun jaunt to Greece with Cher, Meryl Streep, a whopping 16 ABBA numbers, a wedding, reunited octogenarian soulmates, unplanned pregnancies and Pierce Brosnan unfortunately singing again. PG13. 114M. BROADWAY.

THE MEG. Jason Statham lands a big one with this brisk giant shark movie with better effects and performances than expected. You're gonna need a bigger popcorn. PG13. 113M. BROADWAY, FORTUNA, MILL CREEK.

MILE 22. Mark Wahlberg frowns into more gunshots as he transports a cop who knows too much for the CIA in this Peter Berg action movie. R. 95M. BROADWAY, FORTUNA, MILL CREEK.

MISSION: IMPOSSIBLE - FALLOUT. A lean, engaging return for the MI team, led by Tom Cruise's Ethan Hunt. Excellent stunts, fights and effects raise the bar in this sixth and best installment of the franchise. PG13. 147M. BROADWAY, MILL CREEK.

THE SLENDER MAN. Teen girls summon the internet-driven urban legend to rescue their friend. PG13. 93M. BROADWAY, MILL CREEK.

THREE IDENTICAL STRANGERS. An engrossing, frustrating documentary about triplets separated at birth, whose happy reunion is blighted by questions surrounding their adoptions. PG13. 147M. MINIPLEX.

PROPERTY TAX DEFAULT (DELINQUENT) LIST

I, John Bartholomew, Humboldt County Tax Collector, State of California, certify that:

The real properties listed below were declared to be in tax default at 12:01 a.m. on July 1, 2015, by operation of law pursuant to Revenue and Taxation Code §3436. The declaration of default was due to nonpayment of the total amount due for the taxes, assessments, and other charges levied in fiscal year 2014 -2015 that were a lien on the listed real property.

Tax-defaulted real property may be redeemed by payment of all unpaid taxes and assessments, together with the additional penalties and fees, as prescribed by law, or it may be redeemed under an installment plan of redemption.

The amount to redeem, including all penalties and fees, as of September 2018, is shown opposite the parcel number and next to the name of the assessee.

All information concerning redemption of tax-defaulted property will be furnished, upon request, by John Bartholomew 825 5th St Room 125 Eureka, CA 95501. (707)476-2540.

PARCEL NUMBERING SYSTEM EXPLANATION

The Assessor's Parcel Number (APN), when used to describe property in this list, refers to the assessor's map book, the map page, the block on the map (if applicable), and the individual parcel on the map page or in the block. The assessor's maps and further explanation of the parcel numbering system are available in the assessor's office.

Property tax defaulted on July 1, 2015, for the taxes, assessments and other charges for the fiscal year 2014-2015.

John Bartholomew
Humboldt County Tax Collector

Executed at Eureka, Humboldt County, California, on August 21st, 2018.
Published in the North Coast Journal on August 23rd, 30th & September 6th 2018.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF
GERALD PATRICK RENNER
CASE NO. PR180179

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of GERALD PATRICK RENNER, GERALD P. RENNER, GERALD RENNER, JERRY RENNER

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Petitioner Patricia M. Renner

In the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt. The petition for probate requests that Patricia M. Renner be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent. THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by court. THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on August 30, 2018 at 2:00 p.m. at the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt, 825 Fifth Street, Eureka, in Dept.: 6.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

PROPERTY TAX DEFAULT (DELINQUENT) LIST

I, John Bartholomew, Humboldt County Tax Collector, State of California, certify that:

The real properties listed below were declared to be in tax default at 12:01 a.m. on July 1, 2014, by operation of law pursuant to Revenue and Taxation Code §3436. The declaration of default was due to nonpayment of the total amount due for the taxes, assessments, and other charges levied in fiscal year 2013 -2014 that were a lien on the listed real property.

Tax-defaulted real property may be redeemed by payment of all unpaid taxes and assessments, together with the additional penalties and fees, as prescribed by law, or it may be redeemed under an installment plan of redemption.

The amount to redeem, including all penalties and fees, as of September 2018, is shown opposite the parcel number and next to the name of the assessee.

All information concerning redemption of tax-defaulted property will be furnished, upon request, by John Bartholomew 825 5th St Room 125 Eureka, CA 95501. (707)476-2540.

PARCEL NUMBERING SYSTEM EXPLANATION

The Assessor's Parcel Number (APN), when used to describe property in this list, refers to the assessor's map book, the map page, the block on the map (if applicable), and the individual parcel on the map page or in the block. The assessor's maps and further explanation of the parcel numbering system are available in the assessor's office.

Property tax defaulted on July 1, 2014, for the taxes, assessments and other charges for the fiscal year 2013-14.

Field Notes

Early Routes out of Humboldt

By Barry Evans

fieldnotes@northcoastjournal.com

If you drive or cycle the rolling mountain road from Bridgeville to Kneeland — it's a county right-of-way, despite all the "no trespassing" signs — you'll be following the first wagon route out of Humboldt to the south. Today, of course, we effortlessly zip along U.S. Highway 101, mostly along the South Fork of the Eel River, but 150 years ago pioneer road builders took to the hills. Follow the old 1877 Overland Route in red on the accompanying old map. Better yet, you can drive the entire route in a few hours, mostly on paved roads.

From Humboldt Bay, wagons were hauled to Kneeland up the steep stretch of what is now Greenwood Heights Drive, before heading through undulating sheep-ranching country on today's Kneeland Road, mentioned above, and down to Bridgeville, the southern gateway into Trinity County to the east.

After crossing the Van Duzen, the route followed today's Alderpoint Road on gentle grades to Blocksburg — then a thriving commercial center — and on to Alderpoint, where it crossed the main fork of the Eel. From there, the Overland Route kept on south to "Old" Harris, thence to Bell Springs after crossing the Mendocino County line. The county line is close to where road builders from the north and south connected the route in 1877. Today, Bell Springs Road, following along the south section of the old route, connects to U.S. Highway 101 at the Candle Works, 10 miles east of Leggett.

Why did those pioneer surveyors choose this long, high route in lieu of today's quick 'n' easy run up the South Fork of the Eel? Mainly, to avoid the major slog of cutting a swath through redwoods, and the steep river banks. Anyone who's been thwarted in their travel plans by Confusion Hill (now bypassed) will appreciate the chronic erosion problems they would have faced.

However, snow and rain made winter travel along the high route a challenge at best, impossible at worst. So just 16 years after the Overland Route was punched through, the county opened the much shorter Mail Ridge Road (in green on the map). This connected Dyerville to the Overland Route at what became New Harris, avoiding the entire Kneeland-Bridgeville-Blocksburg high country, although wagons still had to contend with one

An 1890 map of southwest Humboldt County showing the original 1877 "Overland Route" wagon road south in red. The green line is the more direct 1893 "Mail Ridge Route" (now Dyerville Loop Road) from the confluence of the main and south forks of the Eel (Dyerville) to New Harris. The 1918 Redwood Highway (and later U.S. Highway 101) follow the South Fork. Map by Lillie E. Hamm, public domain steep stretch between McCann and Fruitland. You can check it out for yourself on Dyerville Loop Road (which, despite the name, isn't a loop).

The final route, preceding construction of U.S. Highway 101 in the 1960s, was the Redwood Highway, now the Avenue of the Giants for much of its route. Built between 1910 and 1918, largely with convict labor from San Quentin, it mostly follows the South Fork of the Eel. Why didn't it go along the more obvious main channel? Because that right-of-way had already been appropriated by what would become the Northwest Pacific Railroad. Which is another story, to be saved for a future column.

Barry Evans (barryevans9yahoo.com) dreams of cycling along the Eel River canyon if the line of the Northwest Pacific Railroad ever becomes a public right-of-way.

Free Will Astrology

Week of Aug. 23, 2018

By Rob Breznsy

freewillastrology@freewillastrology.com

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The two pieces of advice I have for you may initially seem contradictory, but they are in fact complementary. Together they'll help guide you through the next three weeks. The first comes from herbalist and wise woman Susan Weed. She suggests that when you face a dilemma, you should ask yourself how you can make it your ally and how you can learn the lesson it has for you. Your second burst of wisdom is from writer Yasmin Mogahed: "Study the hurtful patterns of your life. Then don't repeat them."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Speak the following declaration aloud and see how it feels: "I want strong soft kisses and tender unruly kisses and secret truth kisses and surprise elixir kisses. I deserve them, too." If that puts you in a brave mood, Taurus, add a further affirmation: "I want ingenious affectionate amusements and deep dark appreciation and brisk mirthful lessons and crazy sweet cuddle wrestles. I deserve them, too." What do you think? Do these formulas work for you? Do they put you in the proper frame of mind to co-create transformative intimacy? I hope so. You're entering a phase when you have maximum power to enchant and to be enchanted.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): As you map out your master plan for the next 14 months, I invite you to include the following considerations: an intention to purge pretend feelings and artificial motivations; a promise to change your relationship with old secrets so that they no longer impinge on your room to maneuver; a pledge to explore evocative mysteries that will enhance your courage; a vow to be kinder toward aspects of yourself that you haven't loved well enough; and a search for an additional source of stability that will inspire you to seek more freedom.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): If you have been communing with my horoscopes for a while, you've gotten a decent education — for free! Nonetheless, you shouldn't depend on me for all of your learning needs. Due to my tendency to emphasize the best in you and focus on healing your wounds, I may neglect some aspects of your training. With that as caveat, I'll offer a few meditations about future possibilities. 1. What new subjects or skills do you want to master in the next three years? 2. What's the single most important thing you can do to augment your intelligence? 3. Are there dogmas you believe in so fixedly and rely on so heavily that they obstruct the arrival of fresh ideas? If so, are you willing to at least temporarily set them aside?

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): "All the world's a stage," wrote Shakespeare, "and all the men and women merely players." In other words, we're all performers. Whenever we emerge from solitude and encounter other people, we choose to express certain aspects of our inner experience even as we hide others. Our personalities are facades that display a colorful mix of authenticity and fantasy. Many wise people over the centuries have deprecated this central aspect of human behavior as superficial and dishonest. But author Neil Gaiman thinks otherwise: "We are all wearing masks," he says. "That is what makes us interesting." Invoking his view — and in accordance with current astrological omens — I urge you to celebrate your masks and disguises in the coming weeks. Enjoy the show you present. Dare to entertain your audiences.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): I think you've done enough rehearsals. At this point, the apparent quest for a little extra readiness is beginning to lapse into procrastination. So I'll suggest that you set a date for opening night. I'll nudge you to have a cordial talk with yourself about the value of emphasizing soulfulness over perfectionism. What? You say you're waiting until your heart stops fluttering and your bones stop chattering? I've got good news: The greater your stage fright, the more moving your performance will be.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): In all the time we've worked on diminishing your suffering, we may have not focused enough on the fine art of resolving unfinished business. So let's do that now, just in time for the arrival of your Season of Completion. Are you ready to start drawing the old cycle to a close so you'll be fresh when the new cycle begins? Are you in the mood to conclude this chapter of your life story and earn the relaxing hiatus you will need before launching the next chapter? Even if you don't feel ready, even if you're not in the mood, I suggest you do the work anyway. Any business you leave unfinished now will only return to haunt you later. So don't leave any business unfinished!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Are you ready to mix more business with pleasure and more pleasure with business than you have ever mixed? I predict that in the coming weeks, your social opportunities will serve your professional ambitions and your professional ambitions will serve your social opportunities. You will have more than your usual amount of power to forge new alliances and expand your web of connections. Here's my advice: Be extra charming, but not grossly opportunistic. Sell yourself, but with grace and integrity, not with obsequiousness. Express yourself like a gorgeous force of nature, and encourage others to express themselves like gorgeous forces of nature.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): "When I picture a perfect reader," wrote philosopher Friedrich Nietzsche, "I picture a monster of courage and curiosity, also something supple, cunning, cautious, a born adventurer and discoverer." I suspect he was using the term "monster" with a roguish affection. I am certainly doing that as I direct these same words toward you, dear Sagittarian reader. Of course, I am always appreciative of your courage, curiosity, cunning, suppleness, and adventurousness. But I'm especially excited about those qualities now, because the coming weeks will be a time when they will be both most necessary and most available to you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You do not yet have access to maps of the places where you need to go next. That fact may tempt you to turn around and head back to familiar territory. But I hope you'll press forward even without the maps. Out there in the frontier, adventures await you that will prepare you well for the rest of your long life. And being without maps, at least in the early going, may actually enhance your learning opportunities. Here's another thing you should know: Your intuitive navigational sense will keep improving the farther you get from recognizable landmarks.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Healing isn't impossible. You may not be stuck with your pain forever. The crookedness in your soul and the twist in your heart may not always define who you are. There may come a time when you'll no longer be plagued by obsessive thoughts that keep returning you to the tormenting memories. But if you hope to find the kind of liberation I'm describing here, I advise you to start with these two guidelines: 1. The healing may not happen the way you think it should or imagine it will. 2. The best way to sprout the seeds that will ultimately bloom with the cures is to tell the complete truth.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Nineteenth-century British painter J. M. W. Turner was one of the greats. Renowned for his luminous landscapes, he specialized in depicting the power of nature and the atmospheric drama of light and color. Modern poet Mary Ruefle tells us that although he "painted his own sea monsters," he engaged assistants "to do small animals." She writes that "he could do a great sky, but not rabbits." I'm hoping that unlike Turner, you Piscean folks will go both ways in the coming weeks. Give as much of your creative potency and loving intelligence to the modest details as to the sweeping vistas. ●
